NO MORE COMPROMISES ON THE SIN TAX REFORM BILL

House Bill 5727 (Sin Tax Reform Bill) is a priority legislative measure espoused by the Aquino administration to generate more revenues and address public health concerns. The money to be generated from increasing excise taxes on tobacco and alcohol products will be used to fund the government's Universal Healthcare Program that will benefit all of the country's legislative districts and provide assistance to tobacco farmers.

The original proposal under HB 5727 was to adopt a unitary rate for all tobacco brands. To accommodate concerns of tobacco farmers groups, this has already been amended to a two-tier system. However, certain vested interests in the tobacco industry are pushing for a further watered-down version – a three-tier system – which if adopted, will drastically reduce government's incremental revenue collections.

Incremental revenue collections from sin tax proposals

Lower revenues means lower funds for healthcare.

Lower revenues means lower funds for tobacco farmers' assistance.

Lower revenues means lower allocation for the country's legislative districts.

We urge our honorable legislators to resist all efforts to dilute the objectives of the Sin Tax Reform Bill and reject all attempts to further water-down HB 5727

Appendix 1a: Partial Factor Productivity

Table 1a shows the partial factor productivity (PFP) for the manufacturing sector in the United Kingdom, calculated using the Divisia index method. The table is organized into two main sections: 'Manufacturing' and 'Services'. Each section contains a list of industries and their corresponding PFP values for the years 1980, 1985, 1990, and 1995. The PFP values are calculated as the ratio of output to input, with the base year 1980 set to 1.0. The table shows that PFP generally increased over the period, with the manufacturing sector showing a more significant increase than the services sector.
